Noël Coward’s

HAY FEVER
At the three-quarter mark through 2017, it’s a delight to be presenting one of the highlights of this year’s program.

In fact, we have three outstanding productions on our stages before year’s end, the first being this fabulous revival of Noël Coward’s Hay Fever. Then follows the legendary John Bell in The Father by Florian Zeller and the world premiere of Eddie Perfect’s new play, Vivid White.

Directed by Helpmann Award-winning director Lee Lewis, Hay Fever will have you revelling in its deliciously seductive comedy and unapologetic melodrama. What’s not to love about Coward’s exquisite language performed by an equally exquisite cast? You are in for a treat.

And although we’re approaching the end of the year, we’ve given Melbourne plenty to look forward to with the recent announcement of Season 2018.

2018 is bursting with plays as relevant, irresistible and complex as any we’ve presented in recent times. From the Australian premiere of the National Theatre’s The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time to Geoffrey Rush’s return to MTC in Shakespeare’s Twelfth Night, it is a season you’ll want to be part of.

Season 2018 subscriptions are available now so I encourage you to get your bookings in and join us as we embark on a remarkable year ahead at Melbourne Theatre Company.

Noël Coward’s HAY FEVER

23 SEPTEMBER — 28 OCTOBER 2017
Southbank Theatre, The Sumner

— About the play —
Although Judith, a retired actress, tends towards melodrama in her everyday affairs, and her husband, David, a novelist, can be rather reclusive and foul tempered – the Bliss family can be perfectly charming when they want to be. Their grown-up children, Simon and Sorel, are quite capable of civility too – if it suits them. It is just that, on this blighted weekend, each has invited a guest to stay at their country house without telling any of the others. So dashed inconsiderate! And for their poor guests, perfect agony.

This performance runs for approximately 2 hours and 30 minutes, including two intervals.
Noël Coward was raised as a working class boy in the London suburb of Teddington. His father was an unsuccessful piano salesman and was said to have little personal ambition, often resulting in poor family finances.

From a young age, Coward possessed a natural intelligence; he was an avid reader and instinctive performer with an insatiable ambition to learn and succeed.

Encouraged by his mother to attend a dance academy in London, Coward entered into the professional world of theatre at the age of 12. From this point on his writing and acting career swiftly flourished and he gradually became acquainted with a different class of people.

His breakthrough play was The Vortex (1924), which featured themes of drugs and adultery and made his name as both actor and playwright in the West End and on Broadway.

During the frenzied 1920s and more sedate 1930s, Coward wrote a string of successful plays, musicals and intimate revues including * Fallen Angels* (1925), Hay Fever (1925), Easy Virtue (1926), This Year of Grace (1928), and Bitter Sweet (1929).

‘Work hard, do the best you can, don’t ever lose faith in yourself and take no notice of what other people say about you.’

Noël Coward
His professional partnership with childhood friend Gertrude Lawrence started with Private Lives (1931) and continued with Tonight at 8.30 (1936).

Coward’s presence in the public eye turned him into a celebrity in his own right across both the UK and USA. The media avidly followed and reported on Coward’s plays and public appearances, elevating his celebrity status significantly as his career continued to develop.

Despite his high-profile persona and arguably lavish lifestyle, Coward was fundamentally a man who loved all artistic forms and possessed a work ethic like no other. He immersed himself in work from a young age, which can be seen from the canon of work he produced throughout his
WIT AND WISDOM

Noël Coward was known for unforgettable quips both on and off stage.

Like his self-assured and sometimes outrageous characters in Hay Fever, Coward had a habit of talking about himself in often exaggerated, but always endearing terms.

In regards to his infallible reputation: If you’re a star, you should behave like one. I always have.

In regards to his acting: Television is for appearing on – not for looking at.

A note to the critics: I love criticism just so long as it’s unqualified praise.

A different kind of sobriety: I’m not a heavy drinker, I can sometimes go for hours without touching a drop.

Noël Coward, on himself: I’m an enormously talented man, and there’s no use pretending that I’m not.

On sharing his skills: I have a memory like an elephant. In fact, elephants often consult me.

A forethought about his indelible legacy: In my time I’ve said some noteworthy and exceptionally memorable things.

lifetime; his final verse was written only days before he died. Consequently, Coward became known as ‘The Master’ by many of his contemporaries and fans.

A quote from Lord Louis Mountbatten on Coward’s 70th birthday perhaps best sums this up: ‘There are probably greater painters than Noël, greater novelists than Noël, greater librettists, greater composers of music, greater singers, greater dancers, greater comedians, greater tragedians, greater stage producers, greater film directors, greater cabaret stars, greater TV stars. If there are, they are 14 different people. Only one man combined all 14 labels – The Master.’

Noël Coward at 'Watergate', Bermuda.
Marina Prior grew up with a great love of Noël Coward. She was introduced to The Master’s work by her mother, who performed in Blithe Spirit in the 1950s. ‘He was very highly regarded in our house,’ says Marina.

While this production of Hay Fever may be her first performance in a Noël Coward play, Marina says she has read just about everything he’s written.

‘He’s a brilliant satirist so nothing could make me happier. I’m always happy working comically, and this is one of the most deliciously comic scripts ever.’

It’s believed Noël Coward penned this classic in just three days after spending a weekend out of New York with renowned Broadway actress Laurette Taylor and her husband Hartley Manners. Although it premiered at London’s Ambassadors Theatre nearly one hundred years ago, this comedy of bad manners is still as caustic and seductive today. For Marina, it’s ‘an absolute sparkling night of diversion,’ something she believes the world needs at the moment.

‘It’s such a joy to be able to take on something that is so inherently theatrical … to do any Noël Coward, let alone one of his great plays, is going to be an absolute career highlight for me. It already is.’

The enduring appeal of Hay Fever’s characters is that they are collectively dreadful yet individually terrific. Audiences can’t help but find charm in the Bliss family’s indecorum, quick-wit, and lightning-speed rebuttals. Even their self-absorption is alluring at times. In the centre of it all is the family’s matriarch – the illustrious, revered, grande dame Judith Bliss.

‘It’s just such a delicious character, and such a big character,’ explains Marina. ‘Because she’s an actress, and a very entitled actress, there’s so much scope for fun.’

Having just completed a successful season as the iconic Dolly Levi in the musical Hello, Dolly! before entering the Hay Fever rehearsal room, this Australian stage legend is as busy as ever.

‘I’ve always been conscious of broadening my range and branching out, and never stopping in one spot. I feel like finally, three decades later, that is paying off. I’m getting to play some really exciting and challenging, mature characters. I love this part of my life and my career, where I feel like I can step up into these iconic roles.’

From the Australian premiere of the acclaimed National Theatre production of The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time to Geoffrey Rush’s much anticipated return to the stage in Shakespeare’s comic masterpiece Twelfth Night, we’re thrilled to share a season packed with unmissable shows.

We are delighted to announce that playwrights Dan Giovanonni, Natesha Somasundaram and Kylie Trounson are MTC’s inaugural NEXT STAGE Writers in Residence.

These residencies are part of our landmark NEXT STAGE Writers’ Program designed to nurture Australian writers, providing them with resources, time and support to help further their careers.
